Rating report

Rating rationale

Sound economic institutions and track record of macro-economic stability: Morocco's sound economic institutions, including a sophisticated monetary policy framework, fiscal administration and debt management practices compared to peers, support macro-economic stability and effective policymaking. This has underpinned the country's ability to face recent shocks and supported a comparatively smooth disinflation process in recent months.

Strong funding flexibility and favourable debt profile: Morocco benefits from a good access to capital markets at favourable borrowing rates. Extensive ties with multilateral and bilateral official lenders and a large domestic investor base further underpin funding flexibility, alike a long average maturity and conservative debt management practices.

Sustained reform momentum could yield long-term economic and social dividends: Morocco has a strong track record of implementing long-term structural reforms, including via constructive engagement with international organisations. These have yielded tangible results in terms of economic liberalisation and improved social systems. However, further progress on the execution of the reform agenda, such as the New Development Model, is critical to enhance economic diversification, tackle socio-economic challenges, structurally raise tax mobilisation, and bolster credit fundamentals.

Rating challenges include: i) a low growth potential given moderate wealth levels and economic diversification; ii) elevated public debt coupled with rising spending pressures and high contingent liabilities; and iii) elevated social risks, reflecting weak labour market outcomes and high socio-economic and regional inequalities.
